

Previously Rostered Players

The phrase “previously rostered players” is often used in rules of competition, such as Florida State Cup or Region Cup. This rule limits the number of previously rostered players allowed on a team’s roster.

What is a “previously rostered player?” Any player who has been rostered to another team during the same seasonal year in any fashion and then transfers to any other team is considered a “previously rostered player” for the receiving team.

Some examples:

- If a player is dual rostered and desires to transfer his/her primary status to the team to which he/she is currently rostered with a secondary status, the player will be considered previously rostered.
- Should a player transfer from one team in a club to another team in the same club and then transfer back to the original team, he/she will be considered previously rostered.

The rule of thumb is if the player has been rostered to any other team at any time during the same seasonal year, then the player is considered previously rostered.

The FYSA seasonal year is September 1st - August 31st; however, FYSA allows registration for the new seasonal year to begin prior to September 1st each year. Therefore the seasonal year for competition purposes is from the initial registration date (for 2008-2009 this would be July 15) until the end of the seasonal year. Each affiliate would need to check on the beginning registration date each seasonal year to remain compliant with the appropriate previously rostered player rule for competitions.
